

Data Science in Society 5.0

7th Lesson “Your Career Design (1)”

2026.01

Toru Hayashi

Center for Management of Teaching and Learning

toru-h@staff.kanazawa-u.ac.jp

Today's Menu

- ◆ Creating Lifeline Charts
- ◆ Career Construction Interviews
- ◆ Issues to look back on and issues for next time

Aim of the 7th Lesson

- ◆ Utilize lifeline charts, career construction interviews, etc. to deepen your understanding of yourself as a learner.
- ◆ The purpose of this program is to reflect on your past learning experiences and apply them to your personal growth as a graduate student, as well as to help you design your career for the future.

Creating Lifeline Charts

Creating Lifeline Charts

In the “Event” column, please indicate the event that left the greatest impression on you.

Briefly fill in the following information.

(Fill in the form as briefly as you can understand the contents yourself.)

In the “Name” column, please write the name of the event that made the greatest impression on you.

About and name it.

(The name is for you of the event you entered.

I would give the meaning or the title to the event.
(It is attached with an image such as “I’m going to be able to use this in the future”).

Example of filling out a lifeline chart

Example 1)

Event: Joined the volleyball club in junior high school. Practice was interesting. However, the girls are fed up with each other 's relationships. You' re getting along and then suddenly they swear at you, ignore you, and mildly bully you. I did not want to repeat the Meaningless group behavior (in the bathroom!) I didn 't want to be forced to go with everyone, so I decided to go to kept up the pace.

Name: Recognizing the Individual

Example 2)

Event: I was engrossed in reading a mystery or science fiction novel. Series such as Sherlock Holmes, Lupin, and 20 Faces of the Monster Borrow as much stuff as you can, go home and put aside a lot of books. I was very happy to spend my time reading books in the room.

Name: Entering the World

Career Construction Interviews

People build careers by making meaning of their professional behavior and professional experiences

Mark Savickas,
"Career Construction Theory," (2)

- ◆ They do not simply recall and recount past events, but reconstruct and recount them in such a way that past stories support present choices and provide a foundation for future actions.
- ◆ In other words, rather than basing current actions on the lessons of the past, they interpret the past based on current circumstances and remake them to fit their current needs.

Diagram of Career Construction Theory

Effectiveness of the Narrative Approach

(1) Personal narrative (self-narrative) in the narrative approach promotes awareness of vocational self-concept and meaning in life.

(2) Create a career vision by becoming aware of one's professional self-concept and the meaning of life, and be able to discern the current information and past experiences necessary for one's career vision

(3) Clarification of professional self-concept and life meaning, and a clearer self-narrative can help people adopt the events necessary for themselves, strengthen their social connections, and facilitate their adaptation to the workplace and their surroundings.

Mark Savickas's Keynote Speech

Please click on the URL below to watch the video.

<https://youtu.be/uqz-5ny8T-s>

Today's Review Assignment

Reflection Assignment

- ◆ Please pick up your two main life events and name which you write on lifeline chart and fill in the assignment shown on WebClass and submit it by the limit suggested.